ADEIL 2022: 30th Annual ADEIL Conference – Congratulations to the following recipients of the 2022 ADEIL Course and Excellence in Support Service Awards.

Each year ADEIL seeks out nominations for outstanding distance education courses at the high school and college levels. The ADEIL course award recognizes the accomplishment of the instructor, author, primary editor, and design teams who worked together to create exemplary courses.

Award nominations include a video presentation of each course with narration by the course creators that highlights how they have effectively used instructional materials, activities, assessments, design principals, and engagement strategies in a distance learning environment. A showcase of this year’s nominations is now available on the ADEIL webpage.

The ADEIL Awards Committee is pleased to announce the 2022 ADEIL Course Award winner: Chrystal Trapani, Instructional Technologist and Adjunct Instructor, at Old Dominion University, for her course ENG211C - Introduction to Academic Writing. Ms. Trapani is commended for her dedication to developing a highly accessible, affordable, and innovative course for undergraduate students in the humanities which supports student development of writing and research skills.

“A tremendous effort by all nominees this year and the ADEIL committee commends the hard work of instructors and design teams collaborating to create these high-quality offerings for their students,” said Morgan Johnson, ADEIL Awards Committee Chair.

Each year ADEIL seeks out nominations for Excellence in Support Service Award which recognizes an individual or team who have contributed to support distance education/independent learning, with possible implications for other institutions. The ADEIL Awards Committee is pleased to announce the 2022 ADEIL Support Service Award winner: The University of Wisconsin-Madison's Center for Teaching, Learning, and Mentoring Consulting Team, led by Todd Lunderberg, coordinated by Tom Tobin, and including Margene Anderson, Rich Freese, Ron Cramer, Lisa Jong, Kathy O'Connell, and Dan Pell. The University of Wisconsin-Madison's Center for Teaching, Learning, and Mentoring Consulting Team is recognized for their advocacy for and support of students with disabilities and ensuring faculty were prepared to provide accessible learning experiences for all students.

Thanks to our 2022 ADEIL Awards Committee: Dara Anderson, Bill Davis, Eric Peloza, Erin Paul-Schuetter, Gloria Washington, and Morgan Johnson.

"Congratulations to the 2022 ADEIL Award winners for their contributions and impact to their learning communities," said Dr. Gloria Washington, ADEIL President.
